One day, Peachy,
Bubbles, Lemon Drop and Cotton Candy found a note on their stable door. "Come to the Pony Party at the End of the Rainbow," it said. "The first pony to arrive will win a surprise!"

"I love to race," said Lemon Drop. "I'm so fast, I bet I'll win!"
"You won't win if you stand there all day bragging," the other ponies cried as they ran off!

The four ponies ran and ran until they came to Blossom's garden.
They told Blossom about the race to Bow-Tie's party.
Blossom jumped up so fast, that her sun bonnet blew off.
The other ponies followed her —

— except for one pony who just couldn't resist nibbling
on the sweet flowers.

They jumped through the garden gate into Applejack's orchard. "Come jump and play with me!" she called. The ponies explained that they couldn't stay and Applejack joined the race.

— But one pony stopped to make a wish in the wishing well, and another munched on the apples that fell from the trees.

Running on, the ponies saw Seashell-playing in the ocean. They stopped long enough to invite her along and were on their way —

— Except for the pony that jumped into the water to cool off!

The clowns dressed the ponies in ribbons and hats
and they pranced down the street.

At the end of the parade they followed the path up the mountain to the Rainbow's Door.

They all jumped through, but one tired pony just had to take a quick nap.

"Hooray!" The ponies cried as they slid down the rainbow to Bow-Tie's party. Bow-Tie put a crown on the pony who won the race and led her to the winners circle. "Your special surprise is a wonderful treat!", she said. The winner said she'd share the prize because all the ponies had tried so hard.
